

WHEN THE KAIJU BROKE THE WORLD

An epic tale of love and loss and monsters from the sea !

STORY BY GMACGUFFIN
ART BY JULIE-ANNE STRIANO

When the Kaiju Broke the World

Comic by Julie-Anne Striano

Music engineered & video directed by Jeff Forrest

Written & played by GMacGuffin / back vox Cathryn Beeks

GMacGuffin.com

a booming rumble from the ocean deep a wave is cresting in the south pacific sea our vessel was the closest to the first of many desperate pleas for help from the boil rose a massive beast luminescent scales, rising up 300 feet at least scooped a fishing boat up with a razor claw shoved it in its gaping maw shattered into splinters a single gnash, of its jagged jaw oop oop do-do do-do we're all gonna die when you joined our crew ... well you could not be cuter I knew you were smart cuz you wore glasses and carried a tabalet computer the galley guys said you're a cryptozoologist but that's not a thing – you're a xenoanthropologist

I knew I loved you from the moment we first met the day the kaiju broke the world

oop oop do-do do-do we're all gonna die

monstrous glowing eyes fire bolts of jarring electricity pulverizing all it meets ... with alarming specificity the creature takes the city – buildings crumble like so much cardboard we're adrift in horror and we're listing badly starboard we held each other in a way-too-long embrace and said those words we dared not say until today

oop oop do-do do-do we're all gonna die

